

Panel I : Keeping a Level Playing Field in Achieving Carbon Neutrality: A CBAM Perspective

Moderator:

Dr. Chien-Te Fan

Professor of Law and founding director of Institute of Law for Science & Technology (ILST), National Tsing Hua University, Taiwan

Director of Bioethics and Law Center, National Tsing Hua University, Taiwan.

Biography:

Prof. Chien-Te Fan is a Law Professor and founding Director of Institute of Law for Science & Technology (ILST) in National Tsing Hua University. The Institute is the first graduate academic institute established in Taiwan to emphasize in the fields of science and technology related legal trainings and energy and environment conservation. Professor Fan received his LL.B degree from Soochow University, LL.M degree from University of Washington and J.D. Degree from Puget Sound University. Before he moved to National Tsing Hua University, Professor Fan is a full time professor teaching in Soochow University, School of Law for ten years.

In addition to his academic achievement, Professor Fan also consults the government agencies in different mandate, including the Science and Technology consultation to the President Hall, Government Reorganization to the Administration Yuan, International Agreement negotiation to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Environment Protection Agency, and several other industry related policy and/or legal works, and also served as advisory committee member in Office of Energy and Carbon Reduction, EY (2017) and the membership to the ICC Task Force on “Arbitration of Climate Change Related Disputes (2018).

Professor FAN specializes in energy and environmental law, and the areas of biotechnology and ethic related issues. He is also an experienced scholar involving in UNFCCC negotiation process since 2001 in Marrakesh. Moreover, as a speaker, he was also invited to join the side event several times that held in the COPs.